

What is a permanent exclusion?

A permanent exclusion from a Pupil Referral Unit (PRU) is the last sanction available to a head teacher when, after appropriate investigation, they believe that a pupil has seriously breached the School Discipline Policy.

Permanent exclusion is not a step that head teachers take lightly and they will have made the decision based on the facts that;

- it is in response to a serious breach of the school's discipline policy and;
- allowing your child to remain in school would seriously harm the education or welfare of your child or of others in the school, and usually;
- a range of alternative strategies have been tried and have failed

A formal process has to be followed in the event of a permanent exclusion, and strict timescales are set by the Government for the various parts of the process.

IT IS VERY IMPORTANT THAT YOU UNDERSTAND THE PROCESS OUTLINED IN THIS LEAFLET

How will you know if your child has been excluded?

You will receive a letter from the head teacher of the PRU. This will tell you the reason for the permanent exclusion and your right to request an Independent Review Panel. You should also be contacted by telephone wherever possible.

Independent Review Panel

You have 15 school days in which to request an independent review panel from the date on which you receive the letter from the head teacher of the PRU informing you of their decision to permanently exclude.

You must let the clerk to the Panel know and also send your request in writing within the 15 school days, or your review will not be considered.

The independent review panel will consist of three members and will be able to make the following decisions;

- uphold the exclusion;
- recommend the exclusion be reconsidered;
- quash the decision to exclude and direct reconsideration.

A parent's guide to Independent Review Panels will also be sent direct to you from the Local Authority.

Education during permanent exclusion

During the first 5 days, the PRU will arrange for some work to be provided. It is your responsibility to see that this work is completed and returned. This should be marked and more work provided.

During the first 5 days of a permanent exclusion your child must remain at home. It is your responsibility to make sure your child remains at home and is not present in a public place during school hours.

From the sixth day the Local Authority have a legal duty to provide your child with suitable full time education.

If the Independent Review Panel decide to uphold the permanent exclusion, the Local Authority will continue to provide full time education for your child.

Public Examinations

If your child would miss a Public Examination, the Local Authority should review the exclusion before the date of the examination. Contact the PRU if this is the case.

Children with Special Educational Needs

Head teachers should consider a pupil's Special Educational Needs when reaching the decision to exclude.
