Central concerns

- What governors and governing boards do in new and emerging settings

- The nature of these emerging settings, notably the rise of federations, MATs and trusteeship, and their impact on local governance and headship

- The broader ‘governance’ landscape: LAs, RSCs, Ofsted

- Preparation, quality and principles

(a) Who, why and what?

1. Why does school governance matter?

2. Who are the key partners in the governance process?

3. What are school governors and Governing Boards responsible for?

1. What do school governors and Governing Boards do that is not addressed elsewhere in the range of school accountability and regulatory frameworks?
(b) Emergent landscapes

1. What might governance look and feel like in the emerging landscape?

2. What are the risks implicit in less localized models of school governance?

   1. How does trusteeship in a MAT differ from governorship in a school?

   2. What might headship feel like in the emergent governance landscape?

(c) Preparation, quality and principles

1. How do we best train and induct the various participants in the school governance process?

2. Where and how do we strike the balance between local expertise and expertise sourced from elsewhere?

3. How do we best inspect or otherwise assure the quality of governance?

4. What core principles must underpin any future framework for the governance of our schools?
